Financial Projections

By their nature, financial projections are hypothetical. Stock market performance calculations are based on average constant rates of return. In reality, financial markets fluctuate and as such, financial calculations for a portfolio must be based on actual results that reflect those changes. Any planning that looks to the future must be reviewed periodically to adjust for market conditions, as well as changes in personal goals, objectives, and any other factors.

Past Performance

Past performance cannot be used as an indicator of future performance of any specific investment or investment strategy (including those mentioned on this website). Nothing in the content of this website suggests that any investment or strategy will be profitable or equal any historical performance levels.

Investment Risks

Risks are associated with all investing. Investing in financial instruments such as stocks, bonds, exchange traded funds, mutual funds, and money market funds involve the risk of loss. Principal loss can occur. Some higher risk funds may use borrowing to enhance their returns. Borrowing can magnify gains and losses. Foreign investing involves special risks, including currency risk, along with political and other economic risks. Foreign investing may also be subject to greater volatility. A firm, fund, or market's past investment performance is not a guarantee or predictor of future investment performance.

Rankings and Recognition

Unaffiliated ratings services and or publications may rate, rank, or give other recognition to REDW Stanley Financial Services, LLC. That ranking and or recognition does not give any assurance that the future performance of any specific investment, or planning technique (including those that REDW Stanley recommends), will be successful, profitable, or match any historical performance level(s). Generally, rankings, ratings and recommendations are based on information prepared and submitted by REDW Stanley Financial Advisors, LLC.
